The Humanities and Teacher Education division of Seaver College of Letters, Arts, and Sciences at Pepperdine University, Malibu, California, invites applications for two faculty positions in United States History.

Applications are being accepted for a tenure-track appointment in United States History with the rank of Assistant/Associate Professor. Preference will be given to applicants with a completed Ph.D. by August 2020. Sub-specialization is open, but candidates who can teach courses in Atlantic world, African, California, Native American, or public history are especially encouraged to apply. Teaching duties will include a one-semester survey of United States history along with upper-division and core courses in the history major. The successful candidate will be committed to excellent teaching at the undergraduate level, have a clear and attainable research agenda, and be active in a Christian faith community. The candidate must demonstrate a willingness to support curricular assessment, student advising, and other teaching responsibilities and University service. We are dedicated to increasing diversity among our students and faculty. Please submit application materials at apply.interfolio.com/68696 by October 31, 2019.

Pepperdine University is also accepting applications for a one-year appointment as a Visiting Assistant Professor/Instructor in United States History. Preference will be given to applicants with a completed Ph.D. by August 2020. Teaching responsibilities consist primarily of a one-semester U.S. history survey. The successful candidate will have a commitment to excellent teaching and application materials must reflect a commitment to the Christian values of the University and support of the Seaver College mission.
